KIDS & TEENS RESOURCE CENTRE APPOINTS A NEW FEMALE EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

by Becky Olubunmi Deinde

It's been known globally in the 21st century that women are set to make some innovative changes when given the opportunity. It was with great joy at the beginning of the year to receive the new Executive Director (ED) of Kids & Teens Resource Centre who happens to be a woman in person of Folashade Bamigboye, popularly known as Trinity within the organization. Trinity is the successor of Martin - Mary Falana who spent 16 years as the ED and now retains being the Founder but now as the Chief Executive Officer. Trinity was the Programme Manager of the Organization, she has her degree in Banking and Finance at University of Port Harcourt and her Master in Bachelor of Arts in Business Administration at National open University of Nigeria (NOUN). Folashade is a development worker that is passionate about creating solutions to social issues and offering exceptional service with a mark of excellence.

Ilado Community is one of the adopted communities of the organization that benefits in numerous ways from our social impact programs to aid community development. Earlier this year, there was a capacity building program and free training on Information Communication Technology (ICT) which benefitted close to 40 young persons in the community.

Empowerment program is one of the most reliable means to achieve SDG 1 which is No to Poverty. In achieving this, Kids & Teens collaborated with Bimmy Brown, a Fashion Sociopreneur to empower 20 vulnerable girls from rural Communities via four rounds of training. Afterwards, the best five are selected to partake in a free six month training on fashion design. It is certain that this program is making a lifetime narrative change and closing the poverty gap in its own little way. By the later part of the second half of this year, the five girls will be done and given machines to start up on their own.
